

IN THE UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT
FOR THE DISTRICT OF NEBRASKA

IN THE MATTER OF:)	CASE NO. BK08-80351-TJM
CARLA SUE MARCINIAK,)	CH. 13
Debtor.)

MEMORANDUM

Hearing was held in Omaha, Nebraska, on June 16, 2008, on the Chapter 13 Trustee's Objection to Confirmation (Fil. #12) to the Chapter 13 Plan (Fil. #7), and a Response filed by Debtor (Fil. #17). Howard T. Duncan appeared for Debtor, and Kathleen Laughlin appeared as the Chapter 13 Trustee. This memorandum contains findings of fact and conclusions of law required by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 7052 and Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 52. This is a core proceeding as defined by 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(L).

The Chapter 13 Trustee asserts that the proposed plan does not provide for the payment of all of Debtor's projected disposable income during the five-year plan of reorganization as required by 11 U.S.C. § 1325(b). Specifically, the Chapter 13 Trustee objects to Debtor's calculation under 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(A)(iii) of the amount of a deduction based on a secured motor vehicle claim. Debtor opposes the motion and asserts that she has correctly interpreted § 707(b)(2)(A)(iii).

Debtor owns a 2004 Infinity FX35 vehicle ("Vehicle"). The Vehicle is subject to a lien in favor of Wells Fargo Auto Finance ("Wells Fargo"). According to the proof of claim filed by Wells Fargo, the total indebtedness is $39,339.00. Wells Fargo values the Vehicle at $28,475.00. Under the proposed plan, Debtor intends to "cram down" the Wells Fargo loan to the value of the Vehicle.¹

In completing Form B22C to determine the amount of Debtor's projected disposable income that must be returned to unsecured creditors under the plan, the deduction used by Debtor for the secured debt payments for the Vehicle was based upon the full amount of the car loan rather than the reduced amount to be paid under the plan. The Chapter 13 Trustee asserts that over the life of the plan, Debtor's calculation reduces the amount available for unsecured creditors by approximately $11,000.00.

11 U.S.C. § 1325(b)(1) provides in pertinent part as follows:

If the trustee or the holder of an allowed unsecured claim objects to the confirmation of the plan, then the court may not approve the plan unless, as of the effective date of the plan —

¹Debtor asserts that the Vehicle is worth $26,100.00, but absent an objection to the claim, the value asserted by the creditor in the amount of $28,475.00 will control.

(B) the plan provides that all of the debtor's projected disposable income to be received in the applicable commitment period beginning on the date that the first payment is due under the plan will be applied to make payments to unsecured creditors under the plan.

(Emphasis added.)

Disposable income is defined in § 1325(b)(2) as current monthly income received by the debtor (excluding certain designated sources) less amounts reasonably necessary to be expended for the maintenance or support of the debtor or a dependent of the debtor. Section 1325(b)(3) provides that for debtors above the applicable state median level of income (such as Debtor in this case), amounts reasonably necessary to be expended shall be determined in accordance with subparagraphs (A) and (B) of § 707(b)(3).

Section 707(b) contains the Chapter 7 means test to evaluate whether a rebuttable presumption of abuse arises in connection with a Chapter 7 case. In addition, its calculations have been incorporated into Chapter 13 for purposes of determining a debtor's projected disposable income. Among other things, according to § 707(b)(2)(A)(iii), a debtor may deduct from income "the total of all amounts scheduled as contractually due to secured creditors in each month of the 60 months following the date of the petition" divided by 60.

This Court has previously had the opportunity to review the secured debt deduction under § 707(b)(2)(A)(iii) in the context of a Chapter 7 proceeding where the debtor intended to surrender property securing a debt. In In re Vandenberg, 2008 WL 2020186 (Bankr. D. Neb. May 8, 2008), this Court stated:

I agree that Debtor is entitled to the means test deduction despite her intent to surrender, for two reasons. First, the statute clearly refers to "amounts scheduled as contractually due to secured creditors." The mere act of surrendering or stating an intent to surrender collateral does not alter the contractual obligation to make payments. Second, the means test is simply a calculation to determine whether a presumption of abuse arises. It is not dispositive on the abuse issue. For example, if a presumption of abuse arises as a result of the calculation, the debtor can show special circumstances to rebut the presumption under 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2)(B). Also, if the presumption of abuse does not arise under 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(2), a motion to dismiss for abuse can still be granted (and the intent to surrender can be considered) under 11 U.S.C. § 707(b)(3)

The Chapter 13 Trustee asserts that there are three reasons why the result should be different in the Chapter 13 context. First, while the Chapter 7 calculation to determine whether a presumption of abuse arises is made as of the date of bankruptcy filing, the Chapter 13 means test calculation of projected disposable income is made "as of the effective date of the plan." 11 U.S.C. § 1325(b)(1); In re Suess, ___ B.R. ___, 2008 WL 1883509 (Bankr. W.D. Mo. Apr. 28, 2008). Second, the Chapter 13 plan effectively changes the amounts that are "contractually due" and, therefore, the payments pursuant to the plan are the payments that need to be included in the calculations. Id. See also In re McPherson, 350 B.R. 38 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 2006). Finally, the Chapter 13 Trustee points out that unless the actual plan payments are considered, an under-median debtor (whose plan payments would be based upon their actual income and expenses during the plan as opposed to the § 707 calculations) would actually end up paying more than an over-median debtor. Such a result would be inequitable and contrary to the intent of the bankruptcy amendments.

I agree with the Chapter 13 Trustee. The projected disposable income calculation clearly refers to the effective date of the plan. Further, the plan changes the contractual obligation to the creditor. In the Chapter 13 context, where the intent is to calculate what debtors are capable of repaying to their creditors, it would be nonsensical to allow the debtors a secured debt deduction in an amount that is greater than what they will actually be paying under the plan. See In re Wilson, 383 B.R. 729, 733-34 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2008) (stating “there can be no doubt that the purpose of these amendments to §§ 707(b) and 1325(b) was to require above-median income debtors to make more funds available to their unsecured creditors . . .” and further stating “[i]t would turn the logic of BAPCPA on its head to allow above-median debtors such a deduction [for nonexistent vehicle ownership expense].”).

Therefore, I find that the Chapter 13 Trustee’s Objection to Confirmation of Plan (Fil. #12) should be sustained.

Separate order to be filed.
